

GOVERNOR INFORMATION

Edwin Godfrey

Edwin Godfrey, who holds an MA in law from Queens' College, Cambridge, has recently retired after a long career practising law in the City of London, advising British and overseas corporates on international mergers, joint ventures and commercial contracts. He has also served as a trustee of numerous not-for-profit organisations, largely relating to disability. He is currently a member of the UK and International boards of the overseas charity CBM, which deals with disability in the world's poorest countries, and is chairman of Purple Conversation CIC, a community interest company launched in 2016 with the objective of getting large numbers of disabled people into paid employment. He lives in Hertford, is married to Helen, and has three adult children and (so far) three grandchildren
